New director appointed for District 4

AFTER THE DEATH of Clair McCall, the board of directors at Valley Rural Electric chose to appoint a new director to serve out the remaining months of Clair's term as director of District 4. (District 4 includes the townships of Cass, Clay, Cromwell, Shirley and Springfield as well as the boroughs of Cassville and Saltillo in Huntingdon County.)

After evaluating a number of candidates, Corey Brumbaugh was chosen for the role.

Corey comes to the co-op board with a wealth of business and leadership experience.

Since 2004, he has been self-employed as co-owner of Brumbaugh Lumber, LLC near Shirleysburg.

For six years prior to that, he sold lumber for Industrial Hardwood Corp. in Mount Union and Walker Lumber, Inc. in Clearfield.

He also worked at Blue Triangle Hardwoods, Inc. in Everett and for his father at his lumber mill, Brumbaugh Lumber Co.

In addition, he worked for FCI, an electronic and electrical interconnect systems supplier in Mount Union.

A native of Three Springs, Corey graduated from Southern Huntingdon County High School in 1986. At the same time, he graduated from the automotive mechanics program at the Huntingdon County Career and Technology Center.

Corey's post-secondary education includes business management courses at Dubois Business College and forestry classes at Penn State University and Virginia Tech.

Corey and his family attend The Way Bible Church near McVeytown.

Corey serves as president of the Three Springs Ambulance Service and has been an emergency medical technician for more than 10 years.

In his spare time, he is pursuing his private pilot's license.

Corey and his wife, Sandra, have two children: Coryna, 18, a student at Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va.; and Cheyanne, 16, a student at Calvary Christian Academy in Huntingdon.

Corey L. Brumbaugh
Director, Valley Rural Electric Co-op District 4

Sandra serves as vice president of Bonney Forge in Mount Union.

Corey is 42 years old. He has been a member of Valley REC since 1989.

As appointed director for District 4, Corey is expected to fulfill all the regular responsibilities of a director until his term expires next year.

At a February 2012 dinner meeting, the co-op will, once again, be taking nominations for director of District 4. Corey is expected to seek a regular nomination to the board at that time. However, other co-op members who may be interested in running for director will have the opportunity to be nominated as well.

The election for director of District 4 will take place at the co-op's annual meeting in April. The chosen candidate will serve for a three-year term.

Members residing in District 4 should receive an invitation to the nominating meeting in January 2012.

Demo shows dangers of contacting energized wires

During an educational safety program, held at the co-op's Huntingdon district Sept. 20, Journeyman Lineman Steve Gutshall demonstrated what could happen if a person contacts an energized electric wire. Steve used a hotdog to replicate human flesh. The co-op offers free educational programs to local schools and civic organizations. Fridge standards have saved consumers billions

BY ROLAND RISSER

Director, U.S. DOE Building Technologies Program

Although that late-night trip to the refrigerator may leave you feeling guilty for cheating on your diet, it should leave you feeling good about your fridge's energy consumption. That's because of innovative technology and meaningful energy conservation standards put into place by the U.S. Department of Energy's (DOE) Building Technologies Program.

In recent decades, the DOE has led technological innovation that has vastly improved the energy efficiency of refrigerators and freezers (and thousands of other household appliances). As a result, it's a lot easier on your wallet and the environment to keep ice cream at peak frosty perfection. In fact, today's refrigerators use only about 25 percent of the energy that was required to power models built in 1975 – even though they have increased in size by almost 20 percent and have added energy-using features such as through-the-door ice and water.

The dramatic rise in efficiency began in response to the oil and energy crises of the 1970s when refrigerators typically cost about $1,300 when adjusted for inflation. Refrigeration labels and standards have improved efficiency by two percent every year since 1975. Due to research, useful tools, partnerships with utilities and other organizations, and market initiatives that helped enable refrigerator and other appliance standards, the DOE has helped avoid the construction of up to 31 1-gigawatt power plants with the energy saved since the first federal standards in 1987. That's the same amount of electricity consumed by Spain annually.

Decades worth of progressive energy-efficiency standards for refrigerators translate into big savings for consumers. Compared to refrigerators of the 1970s, today's refrigerators save the nation about $20 billion per year in energy costs, or $150 per year for the average American family.

The next proposed increase in refrigerator and freezer efficiency – set to take effect in 2014 – will save the nation almost four-and-a-half quadrillion BTUs over 30 years. That amount of energy could be used to power a third of Africa for an entire year.

DOE continues to invest even more in future innovations. So go ahead and eat those late night snacks. Your fridge has you covered.

CASSVILLE OKTOBERFEST: A celebration of country life

THE STREETS OF CASSVILLE, a small village in Trough Creek Valley served by the cooperative, were packed with people Sept. 23-25 for the 36th Annual Oktoberfest celebration.

The three-day event, which was free and open to the public, offered a schedule full of attractions for visitors to enjoy, including bingo, horse and carriage rides, an Oktoberfest Run, entertainment by local musicians and singers, antique tractor and classic car shows, helicopter rides, games and an outdoor community church service.

Folks attending the festivities indulged in fresh homemade soups, apple butter and cider and other delicious treats while browsing through rows of homemade handiwork for sale by local artisans.

The tradition of the Cassville Oktoberfest began in 1976, when small towns throughout America were celebrating the nation's bicentennial. The family-friendly atmosphere and community spirit have drawn people back to this annual event every year since then.

Proceeds generated from this year's Oktoberfest benefited the Trough Creek Valley Lions Club and the Trough Creek Valley Volunteer Fire Co.
