Co-op membership: A value all year long

There are a lot of great things about the coming of fall: Cooler temperatures, fall sports, the start of hunting seasons and hikes in the fall foliage. And, since October marks National Cooperative Month, fall brings us another opportunity to think about how the cooperative way of doing business benefits us all.

If we take the time to consider why our not-for-profit, consumer-owned business model is special, we realize that the benefits of membership go well beyond affordable, reliable electricity. At Valley Rural Electric Cooperative, we work hard to deliver that service, safely, to our 22,000 members. But we don't stop there. Because we're a cooperative, we strive to do much more, to find ways of providing real value to you and the communities we serve.

So what exactly does real value mean? Well, in some ways it's basic — like having the ability to connect with a real, local person when you call our office. It could be finding a copy of the Valley News and Penn Lines publications in your mailbox, one of the ways we keep you informed about co-op business and goings-on in Valley territory and across the state.

That value could be something essential, like getting the lights back on more quickly after a storm (such as Hurricane Sandy last October) thanks to mutual-aid agreements that bring line crews in from other co-ops to help us restore power.

Another benefit of membership is seeing Valley employees at work in our community. Our team is comprised of folks who live in and care about our region. In September, Valley's Health and Wellness Committee is putting the cooperative principle of "Concern for Community" to work by holding its second annual charity golf tournament, to benefit a member injured in a car crash earlier this year.

Another way we're involved in the community is when our line workers and other staff periodically visit schools to teach children about electrical safety. Other times we host "hot line" demos at our district offices to teach adults and children alike about hazards.

In August and early September, many members stopped by our booths at the Huntingdon and Juniata county fairs, either to ask questions about Valley's services or just to say hello to some of our longtime fair volunteers. It's one more way we can be available to members.

Using your Co-op Connections Card to get discounts at local businesses and national retailers is a tangible benefit of being a Valley REC member. When you receive the October issue of Penn Lines, be sure to save it as a reference listing of all the businesses participating in the Co-op Connections Card Program.

Please take a minute to read the information on the next page about our Members Helping Members Program. The program is set up so members can help their neighbors who are having difficulty paying electric bills because of various hardships.

Offering our members real value — and working to improve the quality of life in the communities we serve — is just one way we set ourselves apart. That's a value members enjoy all year long, not just during October.

Cooperatively yours,

Wayne F. Miller
President & CEO

Assistance available through Members Helping Members

Valley REC's Members Helping Members Program assists consumers who are facing tough times. The program provides a way for members to donate to a fund that is used to help other members pay their electric bills.

If you'd like to help a co-op neighbor get back on track, please complete the form below and return it with your next bill payment. Whether you can give 50 cents or $50, your contribution, combined with those from other caring co-op consumers, could make a difference for an elderly member living on a reduced income or a young family facing the challenges of rearing children. Members can experience a financial difficulty for many reasons, including hospitalization, divorce or a job loss.

To make lending a hand easy, you have a choice of several billing options, and all donations are tax-deductible.

If you'd like, you can round up your bill to the nearest whole dollar, with the difference earmarked for needy members. For example, if your monthly charges total $86.32, you could choose to round up the amount to $87, with 68 cents going to Members Helping Members. Using this method, your average annual contribution would be about $6.

If you'd prefer, you can simply add $1 to the total due on your bill, for an annual contribution of $12. Actually, any amount you wish may be added to your bill. Or you can also opt for a one-time donation.

APPLY FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

If you are a full-time resident on co-op lines and believe that your situation meets the criteria for assistance through Members Helping Members, please take advantage of this worthwhile program. If you know of a household served by Valley that could benefit from the program, you may apply on their behalf.

To receive assistance, an application form must be completed and returned to the cooperative's headquarters in Huntingdon. Applications will be kept on file for one year. Consumers may reapply annually; however, first-time applicants will be given preference over those who have received funds in prior years. All applications will be kept confidential. There are no income restrictions for applicants.

Dollars will be allocated based on the amount of funding available. Grant levels will be calculated according to electric use, and will be credited to an account only once per year. An account does not have to be in arrears to qualify. However, if the account is in arrears, the consumer receiving funds must sign a payment arrangement form and agree to pay the entire balance plus the current bill within six months.

For more information or an application, contact the co-op's billing department at 814/643-2650 or toll-free 800/432-0680. Or download an application at www.valleyrec.com. Follow the Programs & Services link to Members Helping Members.

New communications tower improves emergency response service to Juniata County residents

By Doug Roles

Director of Member Services

Emergency responders navigating the back roads of western Juniata County no longer have to worry about losing radio communications while trying to find a residence or the scene of a motor vehicle accident. The county's new public safety communications tower in Lack Township provides a reliable link back to the 911 dispatch center in Mifflintown.

The radio tower came online in April and since then has proven to provide the coverage long sought after by county officials. Valley REC worked with county leaders to bring electric service to the tower's remote location.

"It gives us the ability to provide better emergency services to the people in Lack and Tuscarora townships," explains Allen Weaver, Juniata County Emergency Services director.

The 180-foot structure is located on the front ridge of Blacklog Mountain. The site is served by Valley REC's Reed's Gap substation.

Weaver said Juniata County officials have been aware of the spotty coverage in the area for about 20 years but said funding to improve the communications infrastructure has always been an issue. About four years ago, Weaver recalls, the county commissioners committed to making the project happen. Funding for the project included more than $200,000 of Community Development Block Grant monies secured by the commissioners.

"We had previously identified the fact that we needed radio coverage in this area, in the two townships especially," Weaver notes.

The county's radio communications vendor, Motorola, identified the location for the tower. Since it is situated in state forest lands and the electric service to it had to cross other utility rights-of-way, leaders involved in the project had to maintain clear communication among a number of stakeholders as county officials completed the paperwork necessary before site work could begin.

"We installed the underground wire to supply power to the tower," Todd Ross, Valley REC's operations manager, explains. "And we built an overhead line at the top of the mountain."

Most of the electric lines serving the tower were placed underground for aesthetics and to allow for forest regeneration. Underground service also lessens the likelihood of a storm causing a power outage.

Placing the line underground also meant Valley crews did not have to work on the steep terrain to place utility poles.

Weaver says he is pleased with the end result. Once the tower was powered up, emergency services personnel conducted radio checks along the area's back roads and found no dead spots.

Before the Blacklog tower, the county EMS office relied on the radio tower along Route 74 near Ickesburg, but there were areas of Blacklog that were not covered.

“This one is the tower that we use to dispatch fire and EMS in the East Waterford and Beale Township areas,” Weaver explains. “Now these two towers are tied together by microwave; they’re linked.”

Rick Poleck, manager for Valley REC’s Shade Gap district, agrees with Weaver that providing electric service to the tower site was marked by a number of challenges.

“There were several private property owners and Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) lands to be traversed,” Polek says. “There were petroleum and natural gas pipeline crossings involved. The steepness of Shade Mountain’s east slope was perhaps the largest obstacle to overcome for excavation and performing the line work.”

Valley REC employed a subcontractor (Wyles Line Construction) to perform wire pulling. Valley crews then completed connections in weatherproof deep well boxes. Valley linemen utilized the co-op’s track digger in constructing the overhead span, to get the electric wire across the gas line right-of-way. The overhead span was built on a flat area at the top of the mountain. A generator ensures power in the event of an emergency.

“The tower provides much needed communication improvement to an area which is communications-challenged,” Poleck says. “Juniata County is very rural and interspersed with mountains and ridges, natural barriers to communication.”

Right: The shelter at the base of the tower provides climate-controlled housing for communications equipment. Installation of the meter (at left) was one of the last steps in providing electric service to the tower. The new “medium commercial” account is one of the co-op’s most out-of-the-way meters. Fortunately, Valley REC’s automated metering system has eliminated the need for members to read meters. (Photo by Doug Roles)
